Wonderful as a houseplant

Frozen Queen Calla Lily

Only Breck's offers this one-of-a-kind plant. We're thrilled to be the exclusive seller in the U.S. and Canada of this transcendent, this game-changing calla lily! Frozen Queen will enchant you even before its wine-red blooms begin opening. The unique hues and shapes of the variegated foliage are, in a word, breathtaking. Translucent, silvery white leaves irregularly outlined in green brush strokes elegantly twist and curve as they climb skyward. The upright, trumpet-shaped flowers, which are 4" in length and 2-3" in diameter, arrive in midsummer displaying the colour of a good Bordeaux to add gorgeous contrast. This versatile beauty is equally at home outside in the garden and indoors as a houseplant. Outdoors, it deserves a spot in the front row where it can be admired, such as in a border or patio pot. In areas with hot, humid summers, we recommend planting this calla lily where it will get at least some shade and avoid being in direct sunlight during the hottest hours of the day. Don't pass this one by! Zantedeschia

Improved White Feather™ Hosta

HIGHLIGHTED FOR SPRING 2024

Here are some of the most exciting and beautiful items that we're offering this spring. We're confident that you'll find something to enjoy having in your garden!

Improved White Feather™ Hosta

Stronger, more vigorous and more substantial than its predecessor. While the leaves of the original White Feather Hosta grow horizontally, this one's reach for the sky, and are thicker and sturdier. These qualities give Improved White Feather a more upright habit and make it more sun tolerant (although it performs and looks best in full shade). The foliage is uniquely hued, opening as white before developing green veining and then changing to a blend of cream and green in the weeks that follow. We're proud to be the exclusive retailer of this shade-loving masterpiece from renowned hybridizer Arie Blom. PP34727 🌸💡

Beachside Blue Sea Holly Super Sak®

Beachside Blue Sea Holly Super Sak®

Metallic blue flowers dazzle all summer long. Unique colouration and eye-catching flower form lights up the landscape. Iridescent metallic blue flowers and stems sparkle, even from a distance, and add the wow factor to cut-flower displays. Boasts larger blooms than other sea holly varieties—and bees and butterflies love them. This drought-tolerant perennial packs a lot of punch and requires so little care during the growing season. Eryngium zabelii 🌸💡

NAKED LADIES

Before we continue, let's address the elephant in the room—the name! In a nutshell, it's about the foliage. The term "naked ladies" has been used for ages to describe nerines and other similar plants. Depending on your climate and summer rainfall, the slender flower stalks often shoot up when the base foliage isn't present, leaving the blooms in a unique state of "undress."

Amandi Naked Lady

Flower petals elegantly curl back. Blooms are bubblegum pink with deep pink stripes running down the middle of the petals. Their tall stems make them stand out even more in a bed, border or container garden. Nerine bowdenii

Alba Naked Lady

Provides pizzazz to mixed borders. Sprays of pure white, star-shaped blooms are gracefully held aloft on slender but sturdy stems. Narrow, twisted petals curve back to give these scented flowers the look of lilies. An excellent container flower that's also fabulous in a fresh-cut bouquet. Nerine bowdenii

Naked Ladies Collection

Naked Ladies Collection

Exotic-looking, fall-flowering bulbs! The four varieties in this collection produce large, 4–4½" clusters of five to 10 flowers. Their narrow, wavy and recurved petals give these blooms a lovely, delicate appearance. Naked ladies are long lived in the garden and are some of the longest-lasting cut flowers around. Adding further to their appeal in floral arrangements are their long, sturdy stems and slight musky scent. This fragrance sends a strong signal to foraging deer and hungry rabbits to leave the plants alone! Varieties are labeled for ease of planting.

ABOUT THE BREEDER

All four varieties in this alluring collection come from Agro Fleur Select, a well-regarded Dutch nursery that breeds and grows only nerine hybrids, commonly called "naked ladies."

Kitty de Jong (pictured at right) owns and runs the business that her father started more than 50 years ago in Roelofarendsveen, The Netherlands. At that time, the nursery grew all types of cut flowers. He started growing naked ladies about 15 years later.

These flowers used to be available only in pink, but Agro Fleur Select today offers an incredible assortment in different colours, flower sizes and stem lengths. Kitty credits the nursery's breeding success to what she calls her "jewelry box" of many different naked ladies species and varieties from all over the world.

Breck's is proud to offer you this collection of Kitty's best!

Apple Green Coneflower

Flowers won't fade under the summer sun! Wherever you grow this striking coneflower, it's sure to become a popular destination for local butterflies, honeybees and other pollinators for years to come. The large, bright, semi-double blooms unfurl all summer and into early fall. Apple-green petals encompass cones that mature from dark green to lemon yellow. Perfect in a sunny perennial border, beautiful in a bed and the consummate cut flower!

BEE-FRIENDLY PLANTS

The declining honeybee population is an ongoing global crisis. Our most important pollinators, bees love urban settings where there are short flight paths and a variety of different plants and flowers to sample. In fact, bees are more likely to thrive in your backyard than on acres of farmland devoted to single crops.

Purrsian Blue Catmint

Compact, mounded habit is a major step forward for catmint! Low-maintenance perennial blooms for months—and attracts bees and butterflies with its fragrant, periwinkle-blue flowers. It nearly doubles its spread in the second year. Like other catmints, it releases a cat-attracting fragrance when its stems are broken; unlike others, its tidy habit won't get "leggy" during its flowering period. Drought-tolerant plant looks stunning planted near the edges of flowerbeds or in herb gardens. Rabbit and deer resistant. Nepeta faassenii PP24788 🌸✿

Strawberry & Cream Coneflower

Strawberry & Cream Coneflower

A unique hue and flower shape lures admirers and pollinators to your garden. Coneflowers are among the most beloved summertime blooms... and for good reason! This variety boasts big, 4–4½" flowers with white petals that fall away to reveal rich reddish-pink cones—an absolute dream when in full bloom. Drought tolerant and deer resistant, the hardy plant is perfect for adding bold colour and beauty to cutting gardens, containers and borders. Expect it to return each year bigger and brighter than ever. Echinacea 🌸✿

Peacock Butterfly Siberian Iris Mixture

Peacock Butterfly Siberian Iris Mixture

Exotic-looking blooms in a mix of unusual colours. Though Siberian iris are easy to grow in most of North America, they have a lovely, exotic quality that makes them prized for cut-flower arrangements, border plantings and water-garden accents. This gorgeous mix features striking blooms in several hues that are highly unusual for iris. Plants are well branched and produce buds in abundance—each one growing into a gorgeous bloom in midsummer. Robust and long lived, they make any landscape shine with colour and style. Ben's Notes

Reblooming daylilies bloom more than once during a single season. Some bloom in spring and again in late summer or early fall. Others have a succession of bloom periods, one after another for several months. But that's only part of their appeal. Like all daylilies, they're able to thrive in a wide range of climates with minimal care, adapting to various soil and light conditions. They can also tolerate dry spells and are relatively pest and disease resistant. And there are so many colours to choose from!

Ben's Notes

Many people think that if they have a shady yard, they have no choice but to have a foliage garden. This is not true. Some flowers thrive in the shade. These shade-tolerant flowers can add splashes of colour to dark corners. And once planted, they produce lovely blooms for generations. And here's an added advantage: Shade-tolerant flowers don't require as much water because they don't dry out as quickly as other plants.

Cloudy Monkshood

One look and you'll be on cloud nine!

Awaken your garden's late summer to fall palette with the unique hues of Cloudy Monkshood. Planting Bareroot Perennials and Summer Bulbs Is Easy

When your order arrives

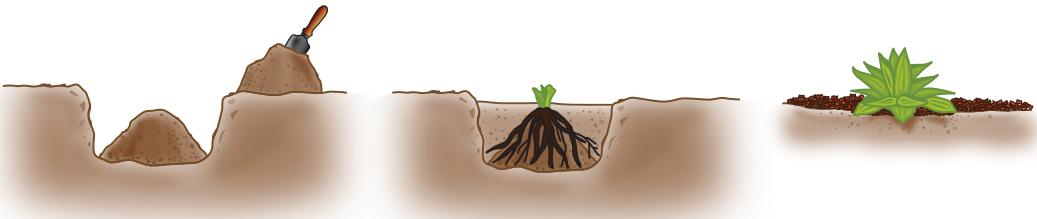

Each Breck's bulb and perennial is packaged with care for easy planting and healthy growing. Be sure to open and inspect your items immediately upon arrival. Don't worry if your bareroot items appear to be dry or dead when they arrive. They are simply dormant, and will spring to life after you plant them. This is the safest and most cost-effective way to ship perennials.

It's best to plant right away, but if that's not possible, you can store your perennials or bulbs safely for a few days in their original shipping bag. Choose a cool (but not freezing) location, like the vegetable drawer of your refrigerator.

Planting bareroot perennials

Remove the perennial from its packing material and trim off any damaged or extra-long roots. It is not uncommon for plants to sprout during shipment. If this has occurred, trim any new growth back to 1-2". While you prepare the planting area, soak the perennial in water for approximately 30 minutes.

Most perennials prefer well-drained soil. For new beds, till the area to a depth of about 10 inches, add a few inches of compost and till again. If you're planting in an established bed, work compost into the top 6-8" of soil. Now you're ready to dig.

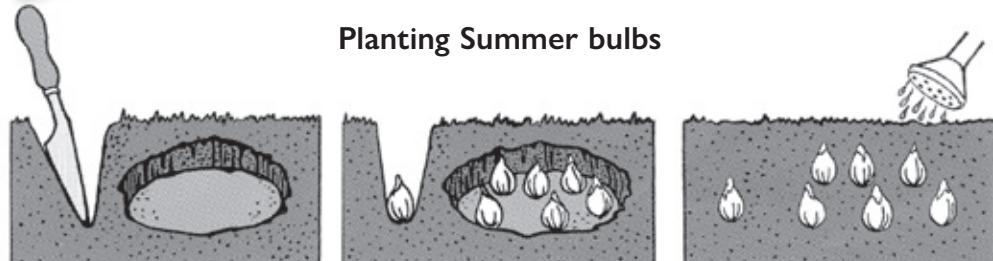

1. Don't plant your new perennials too deep. As a general rule, the top of the perennial (the eye) should be just below the soil surface. After digging, build a cone of soil in the bottom of the planting hole.

2. Place the roots in the hole, spreading them around the surface of the cone. Gently refill the hole, firming the soil with your hands. Water the area well.

3. It could take up to eight weeks for your dormant roots to produce new growth. Once the plant is established, add a 2-3" thick layer of mulch, leaving a few inches bare around the base of the plant.

While each plant or bulb is a complete "plant factory" with built-in nourishment, it's a good idea to mix Breck's Food for Bulbs and Perennials with the loose soil at the bottom of your planting hole. (See p. 83 for product information.)

1. Dig a hole or bed to proper depth for the type of bulb being planted and loosen the soil at the bottom of the hole or bed.

2. Place plant roots or bulbs (generally pointed tips up) at the bottom of hole. Be sure there are no pockets to hold water.

3. Cover with loose soil and pack well. Then give a good initial watering. That's all. Now Mother Nature takes over.

What to expect in your Breck's perennial shipment

The first time you receive a bareroot plant shipment, you may be concerned to see what looks like a bundle of roots and very little, if any, green growth. Please don't worry. Breck's bareroot perennials are dormant or semi-dormant when shipped, but will thrive when it's time—we guarantee it. In fact, they are likely to become established more quickly than perennials transplanted from containers, because the dormant roots are sturdier and unable to be pot-bound.

Some of our most popular perennials will be shipped as shown here:

Examples of summer bulb shipments:

Care after planting

Keep perennial plants watered during their first season, but avoid daily sprinklings. A weekly soaking will encourage a healthier root system. Apply a layer of compost each spring to provide nutrients and maintain soil health. Beyond that, most perennials need little supplemental fertilizer.

Great plants come to those who wait

Many perennials, including peonies, poppies, iris, hellebores, bee balm and lilies-of-the-valley, are known to be slow starters. In fact, the first few years you may only get a few leaves or blooms. But don't let that discourage you—these plants will reward you handsomely once they become established.

Dahlegria White Dahlia

White blooms set off by nearly black foliage. Standing proudly at 20–22" in height, this compact dahlia not only offers a striking contrast in the garden but also serves as a bustling hub for a myriad of pollinators. It melds dramatic, inky foliage with radiant white 4" blooms, occasionally kissed with pink. Its diligent blooming cycle, extending from midsummer to the first frost, ensures a continuous display of beauty, especially when spent flowers are promptly removed. ☀️ 🌸

Advance Dahlia

Lady Darlene Dahlia

Giant Dutch Dinnerplate Dahlias

Prized for their size, these jumbo flowers are often blue-ribbon winners in state fairs and local gardening contests. Pinch back the secondary buds to create showpiece blooms up to 12" across! One stem in a bud vase is all you need to create an impressive display.

Advance Dahlia

Enormous, pastel blooms can reach a remarkable 12" wide! The salmon-pink petals fade to creamy yellow toward the tips. Thick stems steadily support the weight of the flowers and help make this dahlia exceptionally good for cutting. 🌟

Lady Darlene Dahlia

Huge, showy, spherical flowers! Lady Darlene features recurved petals in multiple shades of yellow splashed with magenta-red on the tips, edges and midribs, giving them the appearance of being ablaze. The intensity of the yellow colouring can vary during the season. The shape of the 8–9" blooms makes them ideal for the uniformity of a formal garden. Truly magnificent as a cut flower. 🌟

Belle of Barmera Dahlia

Giant, fully double blooms are delectably two-toned. With island-inspired hues of hot coral-raspberry and sumptuous peach, this dahlia variety creates a tropical paradise right in your own back (or front) yard! The unique flower form features lush, silken petals that twist slightly at the ends. Fortunately, the 4' stems are sturdy enough to hold the massive, 10" blooms upright, keeping them visible from all angles. 🌟

Ben's Notes

In regions north of zone 8, after dahlia foliage has blackened from frost in the fall, cut the foliage to 2–4" above the ground. Lift the tubers from the ground and gently shake to remove excess dirt. Cut away any rotten parts. Hang the tubers upside down to dry. When dry, pack them in loose, fluffy material (dry sand, packing peanuts or vermiculite). Store in a well ventilated, frost-free location (40–45°F is ideal; 35–50°F is acceptable). In the spring, unpack the tubers and replant.

Fleurel Dahlia

Announcing the queen of white dahlias! With delicate shades of cream that trace the centres of each elegant white petal, it's no wonder Fleurel has been dubbed royalty. Tall, sturdy plants are laden with masses of lush, 7–9" blooms all season long. Give them a special spot where they can reign supreme and make a lovely garden statement to capture everyone's attention. 🌟

Shaggy Astrantia

Boasts an exceptionally long flowering period! This plant yields an endless supply of lovely flower heads featuring domed, pincushion-like umbels of ivory-white blooms with papery, greenish-white collars. These pretty, 1–1½" flower clusters are beautifully set off by neatly divided, dark green basal leaves growing low on the stems.

Ben's Notes

If you love butterflies, consider planting a butterfly garden that suits their special needs. Butterflies are cold blooded, so select a planting site that is in the sun. A sheltering wall, fence or stand of evergreens nearby will protect the butterflies from winds. You might also want to place some dark-coloured rocks or boulders among the plants. These will heat up in the sun and give the butterflies a place to rest.

Shaggy Astrantia

Black Pearls Astilbe

Brilliant, deep purple plumes are tinged in blue. While Black Pearls produces the darkest foliage of any astilbe, its vibrant, long-lasting flower plumes are what truly set it apart. Each attention-getting plume consists of hundreds of tiny, deep purple florets with hints of blue. They truly stand out against the plant's divided, fernlike, extremely dark green leaves. Grows easily in regular to moist soil when the earth is not allowed to dry out.

Little Redhead Indian Pink

NEW

Little Redhead Indian Pink

Performs well whether in the sun or the shade! Compact and tidy, this superior selection of the species is popular among wildflower enthusiasts. Tubular, dark red flowers with yellow interiors open above an upright clump of dark green, wedge-shaped leaves. The attention-getting blooms serve as a beacon for butterflies, hummingbirds and other pollinators. Its blooming period begins later than that of the average wildflower, keeping spring flower gardens bright and colourful until summer blooms come in. Little Redhead Indian Pink is adored by everyone seeing it in person! Spigelia marilandica

Cottage Garden Phlox Tree Collection

Massive plants rise up to 7' in year two! This collection's three lush varieties—Hercules, White Titan and Goliath—are the largest phlox on the market. They not only grow up to 7' high in their second year, but for three months out of the year, they produce a nonstop profusion of huge and colourful panicles unequalled in size—up to 15" long and, at their widest point, 10" in diameter. Great in borders and arrangements. Phlox amplifolia

ABOUT THE BREEDER

The giant Phlox Trees being offered in this collection were bred by A. Verschoor Horticulture, a family-owned nursery located in Haarlem, The Netherlands. The company, founded in 1956, is a perennial breeder and grower world-renowned for its tall phlox breeding. It's about a 25-minute drive from our own Dutch offices. For many years, Breck's has had an excellent relationship with Verschoor, and we have first pick when it comes to obtaining phlox for our customers. We carefully evaluate the results from their fields each year. Together, we decide whether to keep or discard each and every plant.

Chater's Double Chamois Hollyhock

Chater's Double Chamois Hollyhock

Amazing height! Crepe-textured, fully double blooms in pale peachy pink and tan add romance and flair to the back border and a vase. For centuries, hollyhocks have been a gardening go-to for their eye-catching flowers and height—and they're loved by butterflies and hummingbirds. Juglone tolerant, they're safe to plant around black walnut trees. Alcea rosea 🌸⚠️⚠️

Kingsize Hosta

Kingsize Hosta

Leaves are 2 feet long and nearly 1½ feet wide! The name says it all—almost. Unlike most jumbo hostas that are slow to start each season, this variety takes off quickly, its huge, deeply veined leaves unfurling to hide withering bulb foliage in the spring and shelter small pets from the summer heat. Bell-shaped, lavender flowers will soon arrive, attracting hummingbirds. Plant it in a large container to make a statement on the patio, or create a shady oasis next to a pond or creek. 🌸⚠️⚠️

Chater's Double Red Hollyhock

Chater's Double Red Hollyhock

Giant beauty is ideal for growing in back of a border. Butterflies, hummingbirds and bees can't resist the allure of the delicately crinkled, scarlet, 3–5" blooms. The fully double flowers grow singly on stalks reaching up to 7' tall. Not only is it drought tolerant and unappetizing to deer, this hollyhock grows safely beneath black walnut trees. It tolerates the toxic juglone released into the ground by the trees' roots. Excellent as a cut flower. Performs best in rich, moist, well-drained soil. Alcea rosea

"I hung three pots outdoors in the shade. The begonias grew and bloomed like crazy! Beautiful! I put two pots on the front porch where they got a little afternoon sun. They grew more slowly and bloomed, but a lot fewer blooms. So when Breck's says shade, it means it."

Ben's Notes

A moonlight garden fills your senses with beauty and fragrance when most gardens are sleeping. White flowers reflect moonlight, as does foliage with pale, variegated colours such as silver, grey and blue-green. But remember, Moonlight gardens aren't just pretty—they attract important pollinators such as bats and moths.

David Phlox

David Phlox

David is one of our favourites, and other experts agree! It features very fragrant, pure white flowers and contrasting deep green foliage. Plants are highly resistant to powdery mildew. The recipient of multiple honours, including the RHS Award of Garden Merit. Phlox paniculata ☀️✿

Siberian Tiger Hosta

Siberian Tiger Hosta

Unusual variety with narrow, buttery yellow stripes.

Many years ago, a Dutch grower imported a unique hosta from its native Japan. With hard work and diligence, the grower was able to produce enough for us to offer this one-of-a-kind hosta to our customers. The grower has no recollection of the original variety's name—our experts believe it might have been Mito No Hana or Anime Tachi—but he called his incredible hybrid Siberian Tiger. We've never seen striping like this in a hosta before, and its unique colouring makes the pattern stand out. The clean green leaves feature narrow, buttery yellow stripes that appear to glow in the daylight. The leaves will become greener as they age. Although a small hosta that grows just 10" tall, Siberian Tiger makes a big impression. You'll want to plant this remarkable creation in a front border or container where everyone can get a close look. ⓘ
